This course explores, compares and contrasts the discipline's dominant analytical perspectives. It provides an overview of the historical and current state of the field. Basic professional expectations, such as conference participation and publishing process, are also discussed. Course reading is a sampling of seminal, representative works from each perspective (for Ph.D. exams you should read the supplementary readings and get Professor Pressman's 5300 syllabi from alternate years).

COURSE REQUIREMENTS: Do all readings. Attend and participate in class discussions. Attend a day of the ISA-NE Conference in November. Write one short memo (1 page) analyzing a week's readings, worth 10%. Write two short papers (5 pages) during the semester, each worth 20% of your final grade. Write one longer paper (10-12 pages) due at the end of the semester, worth 40% of your final grade. Regular attendance, participation in class discussions, and attendance at ISA-NE is worth 10%.

All papers must be double-spaced with reasonable margins and font. Memos are based on the week's assigned readings and should summarize/analyze the readings. We will decide on memo orders during the first class. For other papers, a paper topic will be handed out one week before each paper is due. You will be expected to address, examine, and synthesize arguments and issues from class readings. No additional research or reading is required, but page limits are STRICTLY ENFORCED. Delineating complex arguments in short spaces is a skill you need to develop in order to publish academically. Papers are due at the start of class.

The ISA-NE (International Studies Association-Northeast) annual conference is being held on 4-5 November (Friday & Saturday) at the Providence Biltmore in Providence, Rhode Island. Since the location is close, this is a great opportunity to see what a professional conference is like and see/meet some established scholars (particularly in the critical theory tradition). There will also be a sizeable UConn presence at the conference. You should plan to attend at least one day of the conference. We will discuss registration, car pooling, and other details as the conference draws nearer.

As a professional courtesy, please notify me via email if you are unable to attend a class session. To make an appointment with me, please use UConn's online appointment system: <http://www.advapp.uconn.edu>

COURSE MATERIALS: An electronic copy of this syllabus can be accessed via your HuskyCT page. For articles, stable URLs are provided and can be read/downloaded from a UConn connected computer. PDFs of assigned chapters can be found via HuskyCT under course readings (either listed individually or under the library resources link). The required books are on reserve, or may be bought at the UConn Coop, borrowed via some other library venue (WorldCat, Virtual Catalog online), or purchased (as hard copies or in some cases as ecopies) via an online vendor.

*WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 14 -- FINAL PAPER DUE BY 4PM ****

ISA: The International Studies Association (ISA) is the professional organization for international relations and global studies scholars (more so than APSA). It produces six journals which its members receive as part of their dues: the International Studies Quarterly (ISQ), International Studies Review (ISR), and International Studies Perspective (ISP), Foreign Policy Analysis (FPA), International Political Sociology (IPS), and International Interactions (II). Mark Boyer and myself are co-editors of ISR until 2012. Each of these journals has a particular focus, and the first journal listed above, ISQ, is a highly ranked IR journal reflecting the state of the American IR discipline. If you know that IR will be one of your major fields of study, you should become a student member of ISA.

Annual dues for students are $25 with electronic access to the journals ($35 if you want hard copies). Information on how to join ISA can be found at the association's website: www.isanet.org. If you are going to focus on IR you will also need to attend an ISA annual meeting (usually in February or March) at some point, but first go to its Northeast regional conference (ISA-NE, in November) to get a feel for what is expected at academic conferences. Expect to present at both these venues as you are working toward your doctorate. This year's ISA-NE will be held from November 4-5 in Providence.

Supplementary Readings for POLS5300

A list of supplementary texts for each subject is provided below. None of the supplementary texts are required reading for the course, but consult them if you want to learn more about a subject. The lists will be particularly helpful if you are studying for Ph.D. exams, as they contain texts that were required reading in prior years and/or for Jeremy's version of POLS5300.

IR Theory: Scott Burchill, et. al. (2009) Theories of International Relations, 4th ed. (Palgrave Macmillan); James Der Derian, ed. (1995) International Theory: Critical Investigations (NYU Press); Michael W. Doyle and G.
