1002 INTRODUCTION TO POLITICAL THEORY
FRED LEE MWF 9:05-9:55am
EMRE GERCEK MWF 12:20-1:10pm
Scope: This course has two primary purposes: first, to introduce students to the history and nature of political theory; second, to display how an understanding of political theory helps us in our interpretation of modern politics and current political issues. Political theory focuses on concepts and philosophical ideas that are part of all political issues today: ideas like freedom, justice, equality, power, citizenship, and the meaning of political virtue. This course will engage students in an examination of these issues by examining six Visions of the Political from throughout the history of political thought. Given its size, it will primarily be a lecture course.

1202 INTRODUCTION TO COMPARATIVE POLITICS MWF 11:15-12:50PM
MEINA CAI
Scope: This course will introduce students to major topics and methods of comparative politics. This will include the role of government in the economy, the spread of democracy. Students are expected to leave the course with a good understanding of how to study political systems from a comparative approach. The course will combine lecture, discussion and active participation in “political games”
Requirements: two exams, weekly exercises, periodic quizzes and participation.
Readings: 1 text, an exercise book and a collection of readings.

1402 INTRODUCTION TO INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS TuTh 9:30-10:45AM
STEPHEN DYSON
Scope: An introduction to international politics and theory that covers political, military, and economic issues.
Requirements: Assignments include exams, short assignments, papers, and readings (Textbook and additional articles)

1602 INTRODUCTION TO AMERICAN POLITICS MW 10:10-11AM
DAVID YALOF (*main lecture time –discussion sections listed in peoplesoft)
Scope: This course is an introduction to American politics both for intended political science majors who will go on to more advanced, specialized courses and other students who want a general, basic understanding of the subject. It is designed to cover a broad range of material in such a manner that students can understand the wide variety of questions that have interested American political scientists and the many styles of analysis they have employed in dealing with them. Throughout the course an effort is made not only to convey systematic factual information, but to encourage understanding of concepts and evaluative perspectives that various observers of our politics have developed. Along with lectures held twice a week, individual sections will meet once a week. Work and discussion in sections—intended to supplement lectures, as well as assigned readings, will determine a significant portion of the final grade.
2062WH PRIVACY IN THE INFORMATION AGE

KRISTIN KELLY

Scope: As technology has made information increasingly available; academics, activists, policymakers, and citizens have struggled to define (and to redefine) the meaning of privacy. By providing a thematic overview of the topic of privacy from a wide variety of disciplinary perspectives, this course will prepare honors students to critically engage with the many and varied public policy, legal, and ethical debates that arise when privacy is perceived to be at stake. The thematic focus of the course (Privacy in the Information Age) will provide students with the opportunity to engage in an ongoing discussion with one another about the impact of technology and scientific advances on how privacy is conceptualized, valued, enacted, and protected.

2072Q QUANTITATIVE ANALYSIS IN POLITICAL SCIENCE

SAMUEL BEST

TuTh 2-3:15PM
STAFF
MWF 9:05-9:55AM
STAFF
MWF 11:15a-12:05p

Scope: An introduction to quantitative research methods widely used in conducting thoughtful research in social sciences in general and political science in particular. Specific topics that will be covered include data description, probability theory, inferential statistics, and non parametric statistics. Upon the conclusion of this class, the student should be able to understand how different types of statistics can or cannot be used to analyze political phenomena, including the questions in public policy. Students must have taken MATH 101 or a passing grade on the Q readiness Test.

Readings: Two textbooks
Requirements: Independent research project; homework exercises.
Format: Lecture, statistical lab work.

2607 AMERICAN POLITICAL PARTIES

RONALD SCHURIN

TuTh 11-12:15PM

Scope: Scope: An analysis of the aims, organization, and growth of political parties in the United States.

2998 CONTEMPORARY AFFAIRS IN THE MIDDLE EAST

JEREMEY PRESSMAN

TuTh 11-12:15PM

Scope: We will focus on the contemporary international relations of the Middle East. This includes the foreign policy orientations of major countries, ongoing civil wars, migration, great power intervention, sectarianism, energy and environmental issues, and the Arab-Israeli conflict.

2998 NATIONAL AND CYBER SECURITY

ARTHUR HOUSE

TuTh 2-3:15PM

Scope: An Examination of U.S. National Security Challenges and the Advent of Cyber Warfare.

2998 RETHINKING COLLECTIVITY

EMRE GERCEK

MWF 2:30-3:20PM

Scope: After two world wars, the Holocaust, anticolonial movements, and totalitarianism, thinkers in twentieth-century Europe started to question the idea of humans as the rational creators of a better world. This questioning also informed the ideas of collectivity and agency: how can we rethink transformative collective agency? This course considers the humanist, anticolonial, structuralist, feminist, and post-structuralist responses to this question. It explores how thinkers from these perspectives offered alternative ideas of collectivity and agency and, in so doing, redefined other key concepts such as self, power, action, emancipation, and democracy.

2998 POLITICAL THEORY AND POPULAR MUSIC
MICHAEL MORRELL
TuTh 3:30-4:45

2998 THE 2020 ELECTIONS
SAMUEL BEST
Tu 4-6:30PM

2998W CRITICAL ELECTIONS IN US HISTORY
RONALD SCHURIN
TuTh 9:30-10:45AM
Scope: While most presidential elections have some impact on politics and public policy, a few in the course of American history have truly redefined the role of government and reshaped the American party system. This class will look closely at the concept of the “realigning election,” beginning with a theoretical overview and proceeding to a close examination of elections generally placed in this category: 1828, 1860, 1896, 1932, 1980. We will also explore more recent contests that may or may not belong on this list. What made these elections unique? What were the economic and social circumstances at the time, and how did the candidates and parties seek to capitalize on underlying issues? What did the results say about American society, and how did the outcomes change the nation’s political system?

2998W THE 2020 PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION
JEFFERY LADEWIG
M 9:30-12AM
Scope: Analytically explore the dynamics of the 2020 presidential campaigns and elections from various perspectives including institutional, demographic, economic, and the media.

2998W COMPARATIVE GENDER POLITICS
HIND AHMED ZAKI
MWF 1:25-2:15PM

2998W LEGAL HISTORIES RESEARCH
CHARLES VENATOR
M 4-6PM

2998W POLITICS OF MEMORIALIZING WAR AND PEACE
CHRISTINE SYLVESTER
TuTh 2:00-3:15
Scope: This course considers processes whereby major wars are remembered and memorialized in the USA and elsewhere. The question addressed throughout is whose version of a war is remembered and memorialized and whose is ignored, disputed, or assigned less legitimacy in the politics of memorialization? Cases revolve around the atom bombing of Hiroshima, the rape of women in Berlin by Russian troops at the end of World War II, the destruction of ancient artifacts in recent Syrian and Iraqi wars, the politics of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and of Confederate statues today, and how/whose war is curated in museum exhibitions, war cemeteries, and war novels. Geared for advanced undergraduate and graduate students, the course entails student presentations, in-class written analyses, and a culminating paper. Previous courses in international relations or issues of public memory helpful.

<td>Scope: The goal of this course is to explore some ideas that appeared early in the history of Western political thought and that continue to influence our thinking today: war, empire, justice, democracy, revolution, and freedom. We will approach these notions by studying six famous works in the history of political thought: Thucydides History of the Peloponnesian War, Plato’s Republic, Aristotle’s Politics, The Bible, and Machiavelli’s The Prince and Discourses on Livy.</td>

<td>Scope: Human rights have become a significant part of contemporary political discourse and social activism, and many problems and disputes, ranging from child labor to corporate responsibilities, are framed as human rights issues. However, “human rights” is not a new concept or concern. This course explores the articulation of human rights at different time points and in different cultures, as well as some current human rights issues, such as health care, women’s rights, and humanitarian intervention.</td>

<td>Scope: This is a course on the complex relationship between oil and politics. It seeks to develop students’ research, thinking and writing skills about the role of oil in the international political system as well as in domestic politics. Today, oil undeniably affects all aspects of our lives but who really controls oil resources and what does that mean for national and international distribution of political power? How has the contest over oil resources affected the relations among nations as well as the economic, political, social and environmental development of oil-rich countries? What are the alternatives to oil and what needs to be done to reduce dependency on it? This course will address these questions as well as analyze and compare individual cases of how oil shapes the way we think about the world.</td>

<td>COMPARATIVE HUMAN RIGHTS</td>

<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Scope: The subject of human rights is generally organized around several core theoretical concepts, including but not limited to: 1) the divisions between what are called different “generations” or types of rights; 2) the distinction among different aspects of state responsibility for rights; and 3) the spheres in which rights are realized (i.e., public versus private sphere). This course explores and challenges these core concepts by contrasting human rights experiences in different regions and subject areas.</td>

Importantly, theories of power and politics are not confined to state institutions and their interactions. They also include the role of non-state actors, such as international organizations, NGOs, and transnational corporations, in shaping global governance and influence. These actors, often referred to as 'transnational' or 'transnational actors,' are capable of exercising significant influence on state policies and international relations. Their impact can be felt in various domains, including economic development, environmental protection, and human rights.

Scope: This course examines political and economic change in modern Latin America. We will undertake both a historical overview and analyze current events and issues. The first part of the course will examine the shift from elite rule to mass politics in the first half of the 20th century. During this period, economic growth and modernization led to the rise of two new urban classes—a new commercial/industrial elite and a new working class. These two groups—along with other groups such as the church and the military, formed different coalitions, which led to different party systems and political regimes. In some cases, these political regimes led to stable civilian rule, and in others, the rise of military dictatorships in the 1970s and 1980s. The second part of the course examines political and economic changes at the end of the twentieth century. We will study economic change, particularly the effects of the debt crisis, changes in international finance and the shift towards market reforms. Using a comparative framework, we will examine the process of economic and political change from both a historical perspective and the contemporary period in a group of five countries (Mexico, Venezuela, Chile, Brazil and Argentina).

Scope: Gender aspects of war. Masculinities and militaries; gender-based war violence; laws of war and post-war conditions for male and female soldiers and civilians.

Scope: This course seeks to provide students with the means to critically analyze environmental concerns globally. As a result, the course is inherently interdisciplinary, as students will need to understand concepts from economics and the biophysical sciences to grapple with the environmental problems facing the global community today. The course is also squarely focused on the environment as a global problem, as most environmental problems present transboundary policy challenges for which current political structures are ill-equipped to handle. Thus, environmental solutions demand policy options that are difficult to formulate in contemporary national and global politics.

Requirements: Several reflective essays; group research project.

Scope: Nature and origin of violence, including torture, genocide, terrorism, and civil war, on the part of individuals, non-state groups, and states.

Scope: The measurement of human rights practices and conditions is the first step towards building theories to explain the causes and consequences of government respect for human rights. More importantly, it also facilitates evidence-based policy making, which is the making of policy decisions.
based on careful and rigorous analysis using sound and transparent data. Further, research and reports using data generate a good deal of public pressure to improve human rights practices by empowering activists to stimulate discussion about, and draw attention to, human rights issues. All of these types of things are necessary in the effort to attain human dignity for all persons worldwide. This course is part lecture, part workshop, and part practical real-world application; all in the realm of human rights measurement.

3464W ARAB-ISRAELI CONFLICT
   JEREMEY PRESSMAN
Scope: This course addresses the politics, history, and other aspects of Arab-Israeli and Israeli-Palestinian relations. Assignments: readings, paper, exams, simulation.

3606 ELECTION ADMINISTRATION
   PAUL HERRNSON

3608H ART/SCIENCE/BUSINESS OF CAMPAIGNS
   PAUL HERRNSON
Scope: This course explores the impact of knowledge developed in fields ranging from political science, psychology, communication, statistics, computer science, marketing, and the fine arts on the conduct of modern political campaigns.

3633 RACE AND POLICY
   SHAYLA NUNNALLY

3647 BLACK LEADERSHIP AND CIVIL RIGHTS
   EVELYN SIMIEN
Scope: This course has been designed to introduce students to black leadership, specifically the principles, goals, and strategies used by African American men and women to secure basic citizenship rights during the modern civil rights era. Through critical examination of dramatic and poignant events, students will arrive at some understanding of how African American men and women influenced the political process via public persuasion, grassroots mobilization, and direct action. Students are expected to 1) participate in class dialogue, 2) read new and recent scholarship, and 3) review a rich array of sources—oral histories, memoirs, documentary films, music, and archival sources on the modern civil rights movement. In short, this course focuses squarely upon the modern civil rights movement starting with the murder of Emmett Till and ending with the march from Selma to Montgomery. Requirements of this course include class dialogue, HuskyCT activity, random quizzes, short writing assignments, as well as a midterm and final exam.

3672 WOMEN AND POLITICS
   ZEHRA ARAT
Scope: A cross-cultural study of causes and consequences of gender inequalities and women’s struggles. In addition to the major traditional and feminist gender theories, the course examines national and international political structures, actors, and policies that reinforce or attempt to end inequalities. Although the emphasis is on politics, the course is interdisciplinary in nature and taught from a feminist perspective. It introduces text analysis, some key social scientific concepts, and basic tools of social analysis.
3802 CONSTITUTIONAL LAW
KIMBERLY BERGENDAHL
TuTh 9:30-10:45AM
Scope: This course encompasses the principles of the United States Constitution and how these principles relate to the organization, powers, and limits of the government, as well as to the relationship between the government and the American people. The most fundamental principles include the rule of law, separation of powers, checks and balances, federalism, and individual rights. This course will focus more on the institutional dimension of constitutional law, emphasizing presidential, congressional, and judicial powers, and questions of federalism.

3807 CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS AND LIBERTIES
VIRGINIA HETTINGER
TuTh 8-9:15AM
Scope: This course examines the Supreme Court’s interpretation of the Constitution with a focus on the Bill of Rights. Topics include freedom of expression and association, the separation between church and state and the free exercise of religion, the right to privacy and equal protection.

3812 JUDICIAL POLITICS
VIRGINIA HETTINGER
TuTh 12:30-1:45PM
Scope: The Supreme Court in the Political Process.

3822 LAW AND POPULAR CULTURE
JEFFREY DUDAS
TuTh 11-12:15PM
Scope: This course is an exploration of the myriad relationships between law and popular culture, where popular culture is seen simultaneously as a reflection, a distortion, and a shaper of law and legal practice.

3827 POLITICS OF CRIME AND JUSTICE
KRISTIN KELLY
TuTh 12:30-1:45PM
Scope: This course is designed to provide students with a framework for exploring the meaning and operation of crime and justice in American Society. Topics are organized around four major themes: (1) Politics and Perceptions: The Meaning of Crime in America; (2) Controlling Crime: Criminal Law, Public Policy and the Police; (3) The Administration of Justice: Courts, Sentencing and Criminal Justice Policy; and (4) Punishment: Goals, Theory and Practice.
Requirements: Midterm, Final, one 8-10 page research paper on a topic developed by each student.
Format: Lecture with an emphasis on class discussion.

4994/4997 SENIOR THESIS
MATTHEW SINGER
TuTh 8-9:15AM
Scope: This course is required for all senior political science majors who are writing an honors thesis. Juniors in the honors program planning on a December graduation must also register for this class. The course will address writing a research design and literature review, structuring a thesis, and the like. This course does NOT count for honors credit.
Requirements: Readings, papers, participation, and presentations.
Admission to class is limited to honors students. Students should contact Professor Sterling-Folker for a permission number.
